

CONTRACT AWARDS

The following awards for the Fuel and Forage Contracts have been made by Major Chandler, Department Quartermaster, as full as we are able to give them this week:

APACHE--Victor Rouiller, wood and charcoal;

Henry Springer, 100,000 pounds corn;

L.B. St. James, barley, hay and 600,000 pounds corn.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE

Henry Springer yesterday received seven more loads of barley and there are yet twelve loads to come. When it all arrives he will have 75 tons. It is stored in the old storehouse of C.P. Head & Co., adjoining the store of C.T. Hayden & Co. Mr. Springer is anxious to close this barley out at a bargain as his business urgently calls him to Albuquerque, New Mexico

Henry Springer's friends were overjoyed on Sunday night last when the town battery announced his arrival from Arizona. He is in trouble at present with some of his creditors, but it is thought, and it is the wish of the majority of our people that matters will be finally arranged so as to allow him full scope to recover from the effects of an unexpected and rather ill advised step on the part of one of his creditors.--ALBUQUERQUE REVIEW.

We believe Mr. Springer's present embarrassment is caused by having several thousand dollars tied up in barley, at Springerville in this county, which he has been unable to dispose of. We hope he will come out all right.--ED. MINER.

THE ALBUQUERQUE REVIEW

HENRY SPRINGER is starting to Round Valley, A.T., to look out For barley interests in that section, and will probably be absent six weeks. He will have for sale about four hundred and fifty thousand pounds which he has induced the farmers to raise by furnishing them with supplies and means to cultivate their crops. If activity, perseverance and strict attention to business will bring success then Springer will harvest greenbacks in his business. It is good to have such men around.

When H. Springer returns from Arizona he will not recognize his house at this place, on account of the alterations made thereon during his absence. Mr. Willie has displayed his skill as a first class mechanic and a man of considerable taste in the handsome counters, shelving, doors and windows he has made and decorated in this establishment. Mrs. Springer has also displayed marked ability in the management of the immense amount of business transacted at this house during the absence of her husband.

In our last we spoke of the anticipated arrival of a new assortment of general merchandise for H. Springer. Those goods got here on Monday and as is customary on such occasions our reporter interviewed them. They consisted of farming implements, dry goods, groceries, ready made clothing and chemicals. The chemicals interested our reporter the most, and after undergoing the fatigue of smelling the outside of the packages and hearing the extraordinary low prices at which Mr. Springer sells things, he finally concluded to dun somebody and invest. Those goods are open to inspection as Mrs. Springer does not wish to bulldoze anyone into buying without being fully satisfied as to the quality of the goods offered.

FROM information received from Santa Fe, it may be presumed that Mr. Henry Springer has arranged matters to the satisfaction of his: creditors and will shortly resume his duties as one of our most enterprising business men.

Everyone here seems rejoiced to hear that matters have taken such a satisfactory turn, for everybody likes Springer.

ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, SATURDAY, APRIL 14, 1877, Page 2.

POISONED--A young man named James Roberts, who until recently, was a bookkeeper of Mr. Henry Springer, merchant of this place, was found dead in bed, yesterday morning (Friday); he, apparently, having died without the least manifestation of agony. He was known to have adopted the habit of taking chloral hydrate and Dr. Thomas had cautioned and counseled him to quit the practice, explaining at the same time the deadly effects of an inconsiderate use of the drug. In the apartment where the deceased slept, a glass was found from which he drank some wine. Drs. Thomas and Russ discovered traces of morphine in the sediment left in it. The unfortunate youth was evidently poisoned, but it is possible he partook of the drugs without the intention of committing suicide. Maj. M. Werner has written to his mother at Painfield N.J., to apprise her of the bad news.

HENRY SPRINGER, having returned from Arizona, has opened out his old stand in Albuquerque, a large and splendid assortment of every article required in this market. His store rooms are commodious, well arranged and handsomely fitted up, in fact, cannot be excelled in the Territory. He is prepared to wait on customers with his usual courtesy and will sell as cheap as anyone. Give him a call.

HENRY SPRINGER being resolved to collect more customers, he has reduced his prices and declares no merchant in town shall beat him in selling at the lowest figures. If it was for nothing else than to find out whether he means what he says or not, it would be worth while to give him a call. In our next number Mr. Springer will announce his prices of the principal articles of traffic in this market, but in the meantime, call and see for yourself.

HENRY SPRINGER'S friends will be glad to learn he has finally got a release from his creditors and now another opportunity is left open to him to make a new start in business. If Mr. Springer's intention was to defraud his creditors in the first place, he would not have our sympathies throughout all his trouble, but as we are morally certain such was not his intention and that his embarrassment was brought about solely through the malignity of one of his creditors we, in common with a majority of his friends rejoice at his final liberation.

DEAD--Mrs. Placida Savedra de Springer died at 9 P.M. of Thursday. She was the wife of Henry Springer, of this town, and the mother of a large family, having left ten children to mourn her loss. She was a woman remarkable, for her energetic and industrious character, her charity towards her neighbors and poorer relatives, traits which won for her the universal esteem of our community. Her funeral took place this morning at 9 o'clock, when the corpse was borne to the parish church, there to receive the last rites of those who die in the Lord; from whence it was accompanied by a numerous cortege, comprising the principle people of this section, to the cemetery of Santa Barbara. May she rest in peace.

Last week, we were called upon to rejoice over the good fortune of Mr. Springer, in having finally got out of his financial troubles. But, we had to soon exchange the sentiment of joy for that of sorrow and pity. The loss of an industrious, intelligent and faithful spouse, the mother of his seven young children is enough to excite the sentiments of the profoundest grief in the most obdurate hearts, what then must be the affliction of him who always manifested a tender heart? We offer the afflicted father and children our sincerest sympathies and counsel them to put their trust in Her who is Comforter of the Afflicted, through whose intercession they may gain the grace of resignation.

THE OLD RELIABLE STORE of Franz Huning is one of the oldest mercantile establishments of New Mexico, and one that the vicissitudes of fortune have not impaired after many years of eventful existence. The old firm of Franz and Charles Huning suffered immense losses in years gone by, when it was customary for each mercantile house to do its own freighting and when the risks from hostile Indians first, and afterwards, during the war, from guerrillas or irregular troops made the importing of goods to this Territory a kind of military expedition on a mercantile bases. Notwithstanding those losses of capital the firm never lost its credit and today, while Mr. F. Huning is the sole proprietor, his house stands among the foremost distinguished for energy and stability. Since Henry Springer has took charge of the saleroom he seems to have infused still more life into the business of this house, and being an indefatigable business man himself, enriched with a large experience, he consequently thoroughly understands what is wanting to run the machine to its fullest capacity.

FIFTEEN prairie schooners arrived in port this week laden with all kinds of merchandise for Franz Huning; they were run in alongside the private dock of that gentleman and discharged cargo into the adjoining warehouse on Thursday. A subsequent inspection of the freight astonished our local on account of its variety, the excellent appearance of its quality. In one department he was shown broad shelving reaching from the floor to the ceiling laden with ready made clothing for men and boys of all descriptions, sizes and qualities--he means clothing, not men and boys. Then there were a thousand and one nicknacks or notions crowded away on the opposite side of the spacious, apartment while wide counters running along the centre "groaned" beneath the weight of sheetings etc. In another room the wide awake and attentive salesman, Henry Springer, took advantage of our local's bewilderment and introduced him to the hardware, apartment, where Mr. Springer obliged him to taste something so hard it brought tears to the eyes. Having "done" the hardware section, next came the boot and shoe rooms which, although full to overflowing with attractive ware, did not interest Mr. Local so much as the others, because he considered himself about this time pretty well shod. Lack of time prevents a further inspection of other warehouses which Mr. Springer said were full of "consumables" and as more goods were on the road and a greater future treat was promised, the complete reviewing of this large establishment, of which Albuquerque may be well proud, was deferred until another day. In the meantime our readers can see for themselves by stepping in at the brick front.

ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, SATURDAY, MARCH 29, 1879, Page 2

Some men seem to possess an extraordinary amount of energy when given an occupation congenial to their talents; we were partially led to this conclusion on observing the great amount of customers Henry Springer can attend to and send off satisfied with their purchases at Mr. Huning's big store upon the plaza. There seems to be something dreadful about such excessive labor as that of Mr. Springer; it suggests the thought of an overwrought vitality soon to be consumed by its own intense fire, and then--well Mr. Huning had better get another clerk or two. If he will pardon the suggestion, coming as it does unsought for, (and does not wish to see so useful an aid worn out, played out and done for.

ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO, SATURDAY, MAY 14, 1879, Page 2.

INDICTED--In the Court of Fair Play in and for the County of Bernalillo and Territory of New Mexico: Judge Impartial--presiding, a true bill was found against Franz Huning as proprietor as principal and Henry Springer as salesman and accessory, charged with having shown in the mercantile business an extraordinary amount of emulation and enterprise besides being tainted with too much public spirit. The Jury having heard all the evidence added their own testimony of personal experience and without any consideration indicted Mr. Franz Huning as principal and Henry Springer as accomplices in the committal of the above mentioned offenses. The Court having appointed a day for trial. when the case came on deemed it a duty to itself and the accused in summing up the evidence to charge the Jury, in a very forcible manner upon the unprecedented conduct of the defendants, the singularity of the complaint and consequences involved in allowing a case of this nature to pass unnoticed. Mr. Franz Huning, said His Honor, has been guilty of emulation in business, because the evidence distinctly proved him incapable of allowing anyone to excel him in the quality of merchandise brought to this market, nor in the reasonable prices he asked for goods, neither had he allowed anyone to surprise him in keeping always on hand, the greatest variety of staples and everything needed in the country. His enterprise left no room for doubt, for he had built up the largest commercial establishment in the Rio Abajo, he had also built an excellent steam flouring mill where the best kind of flour was turned out in quantity, his other building properties were too numerous to mention and then his public spirit when pocket diving was in order had become so notorious to mention.

SPRINGER'S TIP-TOP Saloon opened with a free lunch on Wednesday night. Henry is in his nature something like the Corkney girl who said when she was vexed, she was very vexed. So it is with him, when he does anything, he must do it in superlative style. His saloon in its appurtenances and general get up beats all other saloons in New Mexico For stylishness. The liquors he dispenses are costly and of number 1 quality, and his Monarch billiard table is a thing of beauty if not a joy for ever. The gourmands that guzzled his free lunch, could not go the whole of it, though got up in the best style of "Ned" Brandfords artistic cookery, and piles of it remained to tempt the taste of our reporter the next morning.

THE ALBUQUERQUE REVIEW

THE MINT, is the euphonious title given by Henry Springer to his elegantly fitted up saloon. The foundation for the name was probably found in one of the beverages dispensed to thirsty customers and commonly called "mint juleps," for to suppose it had any connection with national coining establishments would be an absurdity, unless it was taken in the sense that Springer intends to coin money out of his new business.

IMPROVEMENTS--Henry Springer, of the Mint, has put up an addition to his block on the southwest corner of the Plaza. It consists of a narrow frame building with a highly ornament and very pretty front, destined to be occupied by a dealer in paints. The idea and execution are both due to carpenter Whitcomb. Henry also intends getting the whole front of his building plastered with lime mortar and blocked off to represent a stone front, which is bound to add not only to its appearance but also, its value as a business house.

THE LATE MR SPRINGER'S FAMILY

A brother of the late Henry Springer is expected here to-night. He comes from Philadelphia and is said to be a good businessman. Upon consultation with old residents, who were upon intimate terms with the deceased, he will be able to learn much concerning his brother's wishes and intentions regarding his property, he having made no will. In this connection it may be stated that the JOURNAL'S slighting reference to the first Mrs. Springer was in very bad taste, to say the least. Her name was Placida Savedra, a sister of Mrs. Fritz Greening, and she had a large circle of influential relatives, who took great interest in Mr. Springer's property, to which she also contributed in no small degree by her own labors. Two daughters by this wife are now being educated in one of the eastern cities.

(Placida's sister is named Francisca Garcia de Greening)
